HOUSE VOTES TO TABLE THE LABOR BILL

Hartford, Conn., May 10.—The labor bill entitled "an act for the better protection of the public welfare against unwarranted strikes and lockouts," was on the table in the legislature late today after a debate and a dispute on parliamentary points. The bill was taken up in order on the call of the calendar.

House Leader Buckley explained it in detail and outlined the objects sought through it. He took issue with the bill of Torrington, a fellow member of the committee, as to the possible effect of the bill. The latter had termed it "a piece of vicious legislation." Mr. Buckley declared that it was no such thing. After considerable debate, Mr. Pendleton of Preston demanded a roll call when the vote was taken.

After the motion for a roll call was put, the clerks reported to speaker Huxford that 33 voted for a roll call and 163 against. The speaker declared the roll call ordered, and-fifth being needed. Mr. Buckley moved a recess and it was so voted. Immediately members claimed that the speaker was wrong in his decision, claiming that the clerks had figured that 33 was more than one-fifth, whereas it was not that part of the total vote of 196.

An anxious recess was ended Speaker Huxford announced that an error had been made on the clerks' computation of the vote. Mr. Wall moved reconsideration, saying that he had been on the prevailing side. Mr. Stoddard of Woodbridge demanded the detail vote as given by the tellers. He was ready to cite Cushing's Manual and decisions in parliament for 200 or 300 years. Mr. Buckley pointed out that there was importance in the speaker's position in the matter. As there was a decrease attendance he moved to table, which was done 123 to 10.

The pending motion is understood to be Mr. Wall's to reconsider the vote on a roll call as disclosed by the report of the section tellers.

The legislative day was a long one and the afternoon sitting was first this session. House Leader Buckley announced there would be a Friday session in order to keep legislation moving.

The bill which would have protected rabbits by prohibiting the use of ferret was killed by the house and the law on this animal remains unchanged.

Mr. Bell of Salisbury moved reconsideration of the bill passed Thursday to appropriate $50,000 for a highway from Grovesendale to Mechanicville, the road which had been pointed out, was a unique project as the state would have a highway when none now exists.

The motion was tabled.

The senate rejected the agriculture bill to provide aid for sheep raisers in the form of wire fencing. The house had adopted this bill over the adverse report of the appropriations committee.

An unfavorable report was made on a bill to provide twelve persons as supervisors in the state board of charities on the ground that such a bill would be opposed to a bill dealing with child welfare which is to come in.

A marketing bureau bill reported, carrying $20,000, was sent to the appropriations committee.

In the house today the bill to prohibit the pollution of inland waters was rejected after Leader Buckley said the judiciary committee had been unable to draw a bill which was equally fair to the manufacturers and the municipalities.

The bill rejected, Mr. Buckley said, provided a penalty for dumping factory wastes by manufacturers into streams, after a period of six years. Streams are now polluted by municipalities, individuals, institutions and others, and the committee had struggled to meet this situation.

It had tried to make the period ten years with a substitute bill. It had concluded the bill would work a hardship and there seemed to be no ground on which the committee could get together. There was no way to finance the problem and to work out the problem fairly to all concerned. For 25 or 30 years the problem had been under discussion but it has not been solved, although $75,000 has been spent in investigations.

Governor Lake sent to the general assembly a communication calling attention to the present situation of the state treasury, so far as it concerns funds available for the payment of current expenses of the state and its institutions. There is available in the state treasury to meet current expenses the sum of $112,356.15. There is due for the absolutely necessary and ordinary expenses of state departments and institutions and particularly the wages of employees of the Connecticut Industrial School for Girls at Middletown, the Mansfield State Training school and hospitals for the Connecticut School for Boys at Meriden, a sum in excess of $114,300. These expenses and particularly these wages must be met and should be paid promptly.

Either an appropriation must be specifically made to meet them or action taken on Senate bill 634, now in the house. The governor said the situation needed immediate attention.

The senate refused to restore forfeited rights to Herbert N. Knapp of Bridgeport, following an unfavorable report. Knapp recently completed a full term for misappropriation of bank funds. Restoration of forfeited rights was refused to Joseph H. Hough of Hartford, who was pardoned after he had served 23 years in the state prison for murder.

Petitions were received in the senate in opposition to a proposed bill affecting strikes and lockouts. The senate adopted a resolution to refer the bill to the committee on Labor.

For injuries suffered when he was struck by the state automobile. A bill authorizing the payment of $15,000 to William H. Norton was defeated, as was a bill providing for payment of $2,837 to James H. Clark of Hartford.

The senate rejected a bill for an appropriation of $40,000 for a trades school at Middletown, this being covered in another measure.

The bill to provide a new charter for New Haven on the city manager plan was reported in print. It made a good start pamphlet. As soon as the bill was received in the house it was put under suspension of the rules and adopted and immediately transmitted to the senate which also adopted it and sent it to the governor.

The girls of the senior class at T. M. H. S. are at work upon their graduation dresses. They are sewing, cutting, and making of white organdy under the direction of Miss Gerdes, instructor in home economics. This creation of the graduation gown is the climax of the course in sewing which is given at T. M. H. S. Beginning with the humble and often disguised gingham apron upon which the Junior III girls prick their fingers have learned to make all the practical articles of a girl's wardrobe. They can take an ordinary paper pattern, adapt it to their needs, cut and make a garment either by hand or machine. They have learned the use of the sewing machine, attachments and all the common stitches in hand sewing.

In the cooking courses the pupils learn canning, preserving, jelly-making, pickling. They can turn out very creditable biscuits, muffins, rolls and excellent bread. They learn the art of cooking the chapter cooks of most so that they are nourishing and palatable. At the close of their course they can plan, cook and serve a practical meal. Along with these courses they learn the ordinary care of the home.

The Junior class is to present at T. M. H. S. the jolly three-act play "The Deacon's Second Wife." Then the public will have the opportunity of finding out the truth in regard to the deacon and his wives.

Arrangements have been made between the state authorities and the trade school committee to establish a co-operative course and Putnam Trade school. It will be arranged so that a boy in four years can receive his high school diploma and a trade certificate from the state. This, as will be seen, means a great saving of time to students. Of course to obtain this double education a pupil must give a part of the summer vacations as well as Saturdays to attendance at the trade school. For those who wish to take advantage of this opportunity the work in the trade school may begin this summer.
